In this Bonus Examples Guide,

I wanted to follow up on the basic training in the main ebook, with some specific examples of how to get help from ChatGPT with each of the chapters/sections of the main PDF.

So after you have read the main guide.

(Please do read that first, or this lot won't make much sense on their own ;))

Have this open alongside, as you recap what you discovered, and then see these specific examples and how they apply to each section.

I hope they provide more insight and use as you explore how to get ChatGPT to help with whatever you do.

So without further ado.

Let's dive right in....

The Prompt I started with...

I would love a follow up style of post for each chapter, where you could help a newbie by showing 3 examples for the topic of each chapter, with a prompt, followed by the content that prompt would help create. Is that something you could do one chapter at a time and then await feedback from me?

I added the prompt I started with, so you can see how I speak to ChatGPT, and how my interactions aren't just a simple "write this" type of post or comment.

I have found the more detailed and specific we can make our Prompts, the better replies we get, the more helpful ChatGPT can be in the answers it delivers, because it has more to go on.

ChatGPT Sure, I can provide follow-up posts for each chapter with three examples, including a prompt and the content that the prompt would help create.

=====

And there you have some examples or 'prompts' and the type of response they get. I hope they give you ideas on questions, or 'prompts' of your own to ask.

The key is to be specific, give as much detail as possible, and hey, even the type or tone of writing, whether you fancy conversational, or professional, maybe a technical academic tone.

Actually, In closing I've popped an image above that might help too:

Now off you go and have fun with it :)
